Description

The Equip coiled cable tube sleeve is a practical and versatile solution for managing and protecting cables in various settings. This sleeve is made of a flexible and durable material that is designed to expand and contract, allowing it to accommodate cables of different lengths and sizes. The coiled design provides a clean and organized appearance while also allowing for easy access to individual cables when needed.

The cable tube sleeve is typically installed by simply feeding the cables through the coiled structure, which holds them securely in place. It helps to prevent cable tangling, knotting, and damage caused by friction or sharp edges. By enclosing the cables within the sleeve, it also protects them from dust, dirt, and potential hazards.
